Justice Robert Beech-Jones appointed as a Justice of the High Court

In very exciting news, Burgmann alumnus Justice Robert Beech-Jones (1984–1986) has been appointed as a Justice of the High Court of Australia and will commence on 6 November 2023.

Justice Beech-Jones is not only the first Tasmanian to serve on the High Court, but also the first Burgie. We would like to offer our congratulations on behalf of the Burgmann community to Justice Beech-Jones for this remarkable achievement!

Principal Renouf says farewell to Burgmann after 13 years

This year will be my last year as Principal at Burgmann, with my last official day in the office likely to be 31 January 2024.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude for a rewarding and transformative professional and personal 13 years at Burgmann College, with eight as Principal. The Burgmann community has shaped my life profoundly: during the time I have been here, I have met my husband, married and had two beautiful children.

It has been an honour to work with the incredible staff and volunteers at Burgmann; their dedication and commitment to our transformative residential experience is unparalleled. It has also been a joy to have met so many alumni of Burgmann College. I have been struck by the fondness with which they remember the College, and how they speak of the role this community played in their lives.

Burgmann Resident 2010-present

Message from the Burgmann College Alumni Association President

Just as Australia is the greatest country on earth, Burgmann College is the greatest residential college on earth. We have the nicest community, the most charming and quirky traditions, an outstanding democratic, egalitarian culture with a thoroughly modern commitment to diversity, respect, working hard and playing hard.

In short, Burgmann has got it all figured out. Importantly, the Burgmann diaspora is now taking the Burgmann way to the rest of the world. Our eleven thousand strong alumni have spread far and wide to share the Burgmann Spirit with their communities.

The Burgmann Alumni history is a proud one. Pleasingly, it is a history full of an authentic commitment to make the world a better place. Burgmann is a place of privilege, but we have used this privilege to better the lives of our community.

Back-to-Burg was a resounding success, from the Friday night Trivia & Monsterbrain Challenge through to Luigi's at the Lodge with Principal Sally Renouf. Burgies young and not-quite-as-young came from all over to reconnect, share memories and make new friends.

The Alumni & Friends Dinner on the Saturday night was the highlight event, and included a Welcome to Country from close Burgmann friend

Aunty Dr Matilda House-Williams, a trip down memory lane with Rev. Dr Lewis Rushbrook, the announcement of the 2023 Alumni Award recipients, and a fantastic performance by the Head of the ANU School of Music, Professor Kim Cunio, with his equally talented wife Heather Lee. And of course, who could forget the incredible after-dinner performance by the Burg band, who had both staff and alumni singing and dancing along.

Inaugural St Beryl Society Event

A special afternoon tea to launch the St Beryl Society was held at Burgmann College on Monday 4 September, where founding members were presented with their St Beryl membership pins, designed by Burgmann alumna Thea Katauskas (1993).

It was a moving occasion which recognised and celebrated the generosity of the Burgmann community, from staff and alumni through to volunteers and friends, who chose to leave Burgmann a gift in their Will. These gifts will transform the lives of residents through scholarships and bursaries, continue the College ethos of egalitarianism and inclusivity, and ensure the success of Burgmann for years to come.

We are so grateful to the founding members of the St Beryl Society for the life-changing support they are providing to future Burgmann residents.

Alumni Profiles

It's about the journey, not the destination: How Burgmann shaped Ewan Isbister's story

"As a shy, conservative country boy, my time at Burgmann was somewhat of a formative time in my life. As Burgmann had a diverse student base from the country, city and international students, it was a hotbed of worldliness for me and opened my eyes to experience all sorts of different cultures and viewpoints. I did a lot of growing up at Burgmann!"

Shortly after I left Uni, I worked at a language translation company, using my language skills. I then moved into import/export marketing roles dealing with the South Pacific and Japan, once again using language and culture skills from my BA Asian Studies degree.

At that point, I realised I wanted to do marketing with a purpose, so I fell into a career of fundraising for charities. I spent several years working in fundraising roles for International NGOs like Amnesty, Greenpeace, UNICEF and WaterAid. These days I am a fundraising consultant, helping small and medium charities develop their fundraising programs, mainly in the environment, international development and health areas [...]. It's extremely fulfilling work as you can see the direct impact on people and places, now and for future generations."

There is no place like Burgmann College, a home away from home: Dr Nina Markovic Khaze on staying connected with the College ▲ Alumna Dr Nina Markovic Khaze (2005-2006) with Dr Douglas H Jones, co-founders of Immunity Group Australia.

The best part of living in the post-graduate residential area at Burgmann was the freedom of thought and expression, abundance of opportunities, friendships made and physical proximity to my lecturers, tutors, libraries and events happening on campus.

The nature surrounding Burgmann College was also unrivalled and simply spectacular. Very early in the mornings, I would gallop across the luscious green lawns past the John Curtin Medical School across to the International Relations Department to hand my essays physically in before the 7am deadline. Next to me there were wallabies, rabbits and other amazing creatures peacefully grazing away and listening to my footsteps in the mud.

Burgmann College has given me a sense of identity and belonging in a new and unfamiliar city, a place where I gathered with friends and family visiting from WA, and where I celebrated my birthdays. I am still in touch with some of my friends from Burgmann, although our lives went separate ways

Reflecting back, it is clear that Burgmann College gives you wings to fly in whatever direction you choose with the right support mechanisms and infrastructure that all students need. This includes the Burgmann Alumni & Friends Mentoring Program (BAM), which I have proudly been a part of for many years. My message to all alumni would be:

"Cherish your Bugmann College residential experiences and help others advance and reach for the stars. You never know what impact you will make by supporting others achieve the unthinkable. That is the true spirit of Burgmann College."

Burgmann gifted a portrait of the College

John Swift and his wife Trish recently gifted Burgmann a beautiful portrait of the College that was painted by accomplished Canberra artist Judy McConchie.

John is the son of Robert (Rob) Swift, a former Chairman of Council from 1984–1999 who received the commissioned portrait as a gift from Burgmann when he retired as Chair.

Rob has since passed away and in his Will requested that upon the passing of his wife, the portrait be bequeathed to the College.

This was a lovely gesture from a wonderful man, and we thank Rob, John and Trish for this cherished gift.

Burgies raise $4000 for MS Plus

Burgmann residents recently participated in the MS Mega Swim at the AIS in Canberra, raising an incredible $4000 for MS Plus, a leading Australian not-for-profit working to improve the lives of people affected by MS.

“The MS Mega Swim is a 24-hour continuous swim, where a member on each team must be swimming at all times. Burg had over 30 people sign up to be a part of the team and managed to come 3rd out of 18 other teams, swimming a total of 73kms. The college helped raise $4000 for MS and came to support and swim during all hours of the night.”

Burg's Diversity Committee update with Angelina Inthavong

Diversity brings an incredible wealth of different experiences, knowledge, and personalities to Burgmann College, enriching our community.

In 2023 the Diversity Committee is continuing to advocate for diverse residents, educate other residents on how to upgrade their allyship and provide support to current and future residents. We are a collective of diverse Burgmann residents (e.g., ethno-culturally diverse, religious diversity, LGBTQIA+, low SES, rural and remote, neurodiverse and people with disabilities, as well as Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander residents) who are passionate about inclusion and actively celebrating diversity.

This year the Diversity Committee has continued to foster a more inclusive culture at Burgmann and actively celebrates diversity through hosting events such as morning tea catchups, a Fireside Chat during Bush Week with the International Rep and Bush Week Sub-Committee, Wear It Purple Day morning tea with the Queer* GSEA, and a Diversity Movie Night screening of Moonlight.

In addition, the Diversity Committee has helped fundraise for the Burgmann College Bursary Appeal. We organised a raffle during the Alumni Weekend and as Diversity Chair I gave a speech about how scholarships and bursaries are life-changing not just for a singular person but the countless other lives that they can also help change.

Meet our 2023 Gender & Sexuality Education Advocates (GSEAs)

Mia Kline - Women's Portfolio

The role of a GSEA at Burgmann is incredibly unique. As a GSEA, you are tasked with amplifying the opinions and views of residents at the college on all issues relating to gender expression, sexuality and culture.

2023 has been abundant with highlights. Namely, my creation of Women's Chats, a weekly designated time for women* identifying or aligned residents at college to speak about what they are passionate about, addressing underlying issues in society or at Burgmann and reflecting on the latest pop culture trend. Moreover, the success of Culture Nights was an extremely rewarding experience for the team, only the second time the series of floor discussions around culture at college has run.

Read more >

Josh Borland - Queer* Portfolio

This year it has been my goal to continue pushing the community of Burgmann to be active allies. Whether that be through celebrating days of significance such as Wear it Purple Day, or allowing safe queer* spaces such as queer* catchups or any other autonomous events that are held. I want people to realise that being an ally means more than tolerating us, it means actively participating, supporting and embracing the queer* community in day-to-day life.

The role of GSEA is vital to the college's culture, and it has been extremely special to be able to hold this role and be the spokesperson of such a diverse community. I love celebrating this community and have been honoured to be provided the platform to achieve things I never thought were possible thanks to the College and all the support systems within it!

Hugh Wassall - Men's Portfolio

I have always been deeply interested in conversations that dissect gender and sexuality. From a young age, I found myself hiding interests I possessed because I thought they fell outside the scope of my gender identity. As I thought more about the topic, it became increasingly clear that interests, behaviours, and quirks are not inherently gendered. No way in which I act and express myself should ever compromise my manhood. Upon entering Burgmann College, it became clear that the men's GSEA role was closely linked with these passions.

Reflections on school, university and college from our mentoring conversations

Alumni Tim Payne (1991–1993) and Joe Negrine (2020–2022) met through our BAM mentoring program and wrote an insightful article in 2022 about the nature of education in Australia, the value of living on campus, as well as the impact of the pandemic on the education experience.

A university education ought to be broad and challenging, humbling and empowering, and eye-opening and horizon-widening. I am privileged to say that, where I have not found this to be the case in the classroom, I have found it at college. The college dining hall, tutorial rooms and common spaces reflect what a university education is meant to be. Buzzing. Interpersonal. Interdisciplinary. Over a meal, you can taste the kaleidoscope of interests, passions and plans of fellow residents. You can engage in discussions with students from completely different fields of study. You can pick the brains of older residents. Every day, you have the chance to completely renew your perspectives.

Remembering the Burg shop, Greasy Louie's hamburger caravan and Lolly Gobble Bliss Bombs

Did you know? In the 70s, Burgmann had its own College shop managed by the residents. While it opened at mealtimes for student essentials such as newspapers, drinks, chocolate and Lolly Gobble Bliss Bombs, it is most fondly remembered for the pies, pastries and sausage rolls it sold after 10pm.

As the College shop was the only late-night takeaway near the ANU

(aside from a hamburger caravan named 'Greasy Louie's'), it became a hub for people from all over ANU, functioning as an Aussie café philosophique for sleep-deprived students craving Coke, a meat pie and enlightening conversation.

If you remember the College shop or have other Burg memories that you'd like to share, let us know at alumni@burgmann.anu.edu.au

Therese Cochrane on the Transformative Effect of Education

Therese Cochrane and Fred Woollard are the parents of alumnus Nicholas (Nick) Woollard (2018-2022). While Therese and Fred began to donate to the Burgmann Hardship Fund during Nick's time as a resident, they have continued their donations since Nick graduated. We are so grateful to them for their ongoing support and generosity.

"Our family was not well off, so my parents sacrificed a lot to fund my living expenses. I was incredibly privileged to attend university at a time when it was free. Many people like myself would not otherwise have had the chance to attend a prestigious university like Sydney (or ANU). I received some Government assistance via TEAS for living expenses and I worked part time the entire time through university. I was well aware of the hand to mouth existence faced by people studying, particularly if they are away from family (which is the case for most students at ANU) [...]

I think most people donate to causes they know. I really loved my time at university and I think that it is a special experience that should be encouraged. I believe in the transformative effect of education for people's lives and that contributing to the ability of people to continue their education, particularly for those who are less well off, is money extremely well spent."

2023 Rhodes Scholar, Bursary & Scholarship Recipient (2019–2022)

We extend our heartfelt thanks to each and every donor who contributed to our Bursary Appeal in May–June, thank you! Your generous support is vital for supporting residents through our Bursary Program and we are forever grateful.

We would also like to express our deep appreciation to our matched funding donors, whose exceptional generosity served as an inspiring catalyst for numerous others to support our Bursary Program.

Thanks to their contributions, we were able to double the impact of every donation up to $50,000 and we were thrilled to share the news that we achieved our fundraising goal, raising $100,000 in our May–June Bursary Appeal. These funds are absolutely critical, as they will provide vital support to future residents alongside their studies.
